Day-care worker strives to keep up with children

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Beatrice Felix crossed the parking lot through brilliant noontime sunshine, and slipped into a side door of the low

Walking softly, she picked her way across the darkened room strewn with rows of low desks and small chairs. She was reporting to work

In the far half of the room, partitioned off by a folding curtain, lay 14 children sprawled on red and blue mattress pads.

'They're still awake, Bea," whispered an older woman sitting in one corner. "I left that to you.

Twenty-year-old Felix - known as "Miss Bea" to the children - smiled and nodded. She turned down some soft music another notch, then surveyed her small

One tousle-haired boy turned restlessly, and she knelt down beside him. Murmuring some comforting words, she began to rub his back. The only other sound in the room was the music

As the boy settled deeper in his pillow, she smoothed his hair gently, and turned toward a girl that was

For the next 25 minutes she moved soundlessly about . the room, straightening a blanket here, patting a shoulder there and occasionally turning the record over.

By 1 p.m. all the children were sleeping soundly. Felix crossed over to the other half of the room, beyond the curtain, and began sorting out graded papers. She has been a co-teacher at the Westminster Presbyterian Church Day Care Center in Ontario for

Time goes by really fast," she said. "Some of the kids have been coming here since they were 2 years old, and you get real attached to them.

Felix used to work as a security guard at Ontario International Airport, but found she didn't like the job.

"There was just too much pressure," she said. "People try to bring in all sorts of dangerous things through the checkpoints, and it's up to you to make sure they don't sneak past.

"I finally quit when my life got threatened.

She had always enjoyed working with children and began scouting out the various day care centers in the area. She settled on the Ontario site because she liked the way it was run, and her 241/2-hour-per-week schedule fit in well around her full-time classes at Mt. San Antonio Community College.

Felix is majoring in business and plans to enter the field of foreign relations.

'I speak English, of course, Spanish, and some French. This is my last year at Mt. SAC - I'm hoping I can transfer to a school in Mexico to polish up on my

The Ontario native has scheduled her sessions with the 4- and 5-year-olds around classes. Tuesdays and Thursdays she reports to work at 11:30 a.m., then grabs a quick bite to eat when she gets off at 5 p.m. so she can make class an hour later.

"This is the perfect thing for me right now," she said, glancing around the gaily decorated room. "We try to make it homey and friendly here for the kids. That's why they call us 'Miss Bea' or 'Miss Phyllis' instead of by our

'Since this is a day-care center where some of the kids have to be instead of at home, we want to make it as much like home as we can.

By 2 p.m., there are sounds of stirring in the other half of the room. Two youngsters stumble through the narrow doorway, rubbing their eyes sleepily, and pull out shoes and socks from colorful bins along one wall.

When they finish getting dressed, Felix suggests quietly that they go color until the other children wake up. 'Miss Bea, when do I get my star?' queried one boy 'Oh, thanks for reminding me," she said, and reached for a box filled with construction paper stars.

'Each time they take a nap, they get a little star," she explained. "After they collect five, they get a surprise." The surprise is "a little trinket" Felix picks up from the local five-and-ten, a small reward for not talking and being good during naptime.

One by one the children straggle back into the main room, until they are all sitting at their desks. The level of chatter grows as they wake up fully and before long 'Miss Bea' begins to bring a little order to the room.

'Justin, why don't you water the flowers?" she asks one boy, and pulls out a box of fat crayons and blunttipped scissors for a quiet little girl.

She opens up the folding doors, and the children help her fold up mats, and place pillows and blankets in their but the young teacher is in control.

When three boys began to throw a stuffed toy around the room, she looked up from the Candyland game and uttered a soft "ohhhh.

Instantly all action in the room stopped. 'All right, boys. You know that's an outside activity

Come sit at your desks.

Although an afternoon at the day-care center is not scheduled like a regular class, Felix finds time to tutor the children in some basic Spanish ("I like languages, and I want them to, too"), read a storybook, take the children down to a snack prepared in the school kitchen, and then outside for a play session.

The exuberant youngsters clamored about a jungle gym, and tossed balls back in forth.

Watch the blonde-haired girl," said Felix, pointing to one youngster running madly about the field with a boy's borrowed belt about her dress. She was followed by a stream of her classmates. "She's Wonder Woman.

A group of girls gathered about the chain link fence to watch three men playing basketball. Soon they began to tease the men, taunting, "We know Spanish, we know

Spanish. Felix walked over to the group, said a few soft words and soon the group began cheering loudly at every basket

"I told them it was nicer to cheer than jeer," she said. By 4:30 p.m., some parents are drifting in to pick up their children. She leads those still left back to the room after washing their hands - where they sing along with a record while she begins straightening the room and putting chairs on top of the desks.

At 5 p.m., Felix took the remaining six children and led them to another room when another teacher watched until the last parents came. She hung a check-out list for the students outside the door, accepted a couple of enthusiastic kisses from two girls, and signed out in the church's office.

The sun has set when she walks back through the parking lot to her car.

'You know, after a day working here, I don't even feel tired." she said. "The kids always seem to perk me up instead of wear me out.

Day care center worker Beatrice Felix takes time out from a game of Candyland with Vida Kashuba, left, and Stephanie Little, center, to admire Casey Zimny's loose tooth. Despite filling the role of teacher, nurse, mother, playmate and disciplinarian during the day. Felix says she finds the job "invigorating.

Upland grows with some restraint

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

The first year of the 1980s has been one of adjustment for the city of Upland, as officials try to meet the needs of a maturing city within economic restraints.

Interest rates creeping as high as 20 percent put a damper on building within the city, but with a new emphasis on a different type of dwelling unit.

Condominiums are becoming popular as an alternative to the traditional single family home, and an ordinance passed by the council in July places strict restrictions on the minimum sizes and amenities for condos and condo conversions

A massive new development to be built on 237 acres on both sides of 16th Street east of Campus Avenue was proposed by Bill Matreyek of Matreyek Homes, Inc. of

The project, the Upland Hills Country Club. will include an 18-hole golf course, waste water treatment plant, hotel, shopping center, up to 20 swimming pools and six tennis courts, and 575 condominiums. Construction is expected to begin early in 1981.

Results of the Federal Census taken in July show an increase of nearly 45 percent over 1970 figures, with 47,0/3, persons residing in the city. The growing population will heip add additional revenue from higher-level govern- .

April elections showed the narrow defeat of a proposed initiative for a public paramedic service in Upland. A two-thirds majority, or 66 percent vote, was required for the initiative to pass. Although the measure achieved majority, 60 percent, it failed to pass.

Incumbent John McCarthy was elected as mayor in the same election, and Planning Commissioner Al Canestro became named a council member.

The council appointed Frank Carpenter, formerly of the planning commision, to fill McCarthy's vacated Doreen "Dee" Carpenter was re-elected as city clerk, and accountant Walt Reardon won the city treasurer's Voters also voted 90 percent in favor of recommending that the city share of sales tax be increased from 1 to 2 cents per dollar

Whipped by Santa Ana winds gusting up to 100 mph, the flames missed doing any damage to homes near the city, but the winds wreaked havoc among several hundred

Upland firefighters joined with others from all over the country to fight the Thunder Fire, originating on Mt. Baldy, and others. More than 850 overtime hours were logged by Upland workers during the disaster

Nature kept city employees busy on another front as officials discovered methane gas, a product of decomposition, leaking from the site of the closed Upland Sanitary Landfill on Campus Avenue at 14th Street.

Neighboring residents were contacted, and all structures in the area monitored to insure the gas was not allowed to build up in any one area.

Harmless in the open atmosphere, methane can become highly explosive when concentrated in an enclosed area. The city will install a control system early in 1981 to place a permanent control on the problem.

Cruisers posed a problem for merchants of Upland's Mountaingreen shopping center during 1980. But with police assistance, the teen-age cruisers were gradually encouraged to move elsewhere. Police now patrol the parking lot

Grad night at Disneyland to be retained

Students attending four schools within the Chaffey Joint Union High School District won't have to miss out on their traditional graduation night at Disneyland despite a conflict with the date of this year's graduation ceremonies

Superintendent Mike Dirksen said Monday that students attending Montclair, Chaffey, Upland and Alta Loma high schools will spend the evening of June 18 at the Orange County amusement park despite the fact that they will graduate June 17.

Dirksen said the park would not be able to accomodate a graduation night celebration June 17 because it is a date the general public is allowed admission. In addition, the park would close at an early hour rather than the traditional 2 a.m. or 4 a.m. time for regular graduation night celebrations.

Students attending Ontario High School will have a June 12 graduation night

In other business, trustees agreed to hold a public hearing on proposed boundary changes within the district on Jan. 12. The special meeting was designed to give trustees a chance to review public comment on the proposal before a final decision is reached in February. Recalls, unrest, tight money plague education

Staff Writer

For West End educators, 1980 was a year of recalls, teacher unrest and budget constraints.

Overcrowding continued to be a problem for some districts while squabbles within the administrations of others drew the attention of the community.

Children fared better in 1980 than some of the school boards that became involved in controversies. Achievement test scores improved over the 1979 level, and scores were consistently higher in the Alta Loma. Etiwanda and Mt. Baldy districts.

Recall efforts against trustees in the Upland, Cucamonga and Mountain View school districts attracted public attention in 1980. The only effort that succeeded was in the Cucamonga School District where two board members were recalled. An effort in Upland broke down. Those seeking to recall a board member in the Mountain View district continue their effort.

The Ontario-Montclair School District experienced a controversial year. It began with parents at Mission School asking for an investigation into the work of principal Norman Enfield. Enfield stayed on as principal and parents say his leadership has improved this year.

Later in the year, a management consulting firm completed a report criticizing the districts administration, and asked for administrative reorganization.

District officials received the report with skepticism and irritation but in the end, deputy superintendent George Duerr and assistant superintendent Charles Robar were demoted.

Proponents of the reoganization said it would mean a new computer system, provide for better student records and make better use of district resources.

Two board members in the Mountain View District came under fire after they criticized school administrators, but they withdrew their allegations after being elected to the board.

Richard Bleuze later resigned his board seat but Pamela Oedekerk held on until a controversial meeting in November during which she walked out, indicating she was upset with other board members. The rest of the board took the statement as a resignation and the matter was sent to the county superintendent where a decision is expected to be made

A recall effort against Oedekerk continues.

Despite difficult times, the district opened its first library thanks to help from parent book donations and a grant from the federal government. Three years of work culminated this month with the dedication of a park alongside Mountain View School.

The year began badly for the Upland School District. A Molotov cocktail was thrown into the front office at Foothill Knolls School and the building was gutted by flames. Operations were back to normal at the school in Another controversy began in May when trustees reassigned Cabrillo School principal Oliver Soderberg to the classroom

Pettitions and letters from parents were presented to the board, which stood behind its decision.

Boundary changes also created an uproar when trustees approved a plan that sent students to Upland Junior High to relieve congestion at Pioneer Junior

The uproar culminated in a recall movement against trustees Dina Hunter, Barry Brandt and Rick Minnis. The movement lost support and the recall effort

There was good news for the Alta Loma School District in 1980. On double sessions just a few years ago, the district is building a new school that will be open next year. Plans for another elementary school are being drawn and both schools will be constructed with state capital improvement funds.

Arson was suspected when a fire broke out in the administration building at Alta Loma Junior High.

Teacher salaries evolved into a controversy in the Central School District. Teachers, who had agreed to a 7 percent pay hike two years ago, felt their salaries were not competitive with surrounding districts and asked for

Despite a heated dispute, teachers eventually settled for the original salary increase.

Busing also became an issue in the district. Parents disagreed with the busing boundaries that were established, saying it was too dangerous for their children to walk to school.

The district maintained it was spending too much to bus children.

A management study proposed that the district add several new positions. A search for people to fill them is

Public housing future unclear

By KEN SWART Staff Writer

The future use of publicly-assisted housing programs is still uncertain under the new administration of President-elect Ronald Reagan.

That was how a top county housing official described the current situation during a meeting of about 15 major apartment house owners and managers

'Things are at a standstill,' said Carl Bomgardner, West End housing manager for the Housing Authority of San Bernardino County.

"We don't know what to anticipate once the new administration comes on board, but we're hopeful we can continue and expand the programs we've got," Bomgardner

Bomgardner spent most of his time Tuesday night telling city officials and apartment landlords how a program called Section 8

Most landlords, even those who now participate in the Section 8 program, were obviously still skeptical about its effectiveness.

Although landlords who use the voluntary program are faced with extra paperwork, Bomgardner "I would like to give people more confidence in the program.

An answer to the housing needs of low-income tenants is subsidizing their rents, not placing them in institutionalized settings, he said.

Under the Section 8 program, tenants pay no more than 30 percent of their monthly income toward for rent. The county reimburses a landlord in cash for the remainder. Every tenant in the program is screened by the county. When a tenant finds the housing he needs, the county arranges a rental payment.

We qualify the tenants and then send them to you," Bomgardner told the landlords. "You still select your welfare or Social Security checks, Bomgardner said. Most are "nonworking people," he conceded.

When a landlord said, "You've got to lower your standards to accept a Section 8 tenant," Bomgardner responded, "The fact that you're poor doesn't make you a poor citizen."

A maximum fair-market rent is established by the federal Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD) for specific areas of the U.S.

'You may feel in a lot of cases that fair-market rent is inadequate," Bomgardner told the audience. "At times it may be true. But eventually HUD does catch up."

The thrust of the program, Bomgardner said, "is if someone can't meet that fair-market rent, he's subsidized by the federal govern-

A recall effort in the Cucamonga School District ousted trustees David Ortega and David Hernandez. The district had undergone major changes in its administration in the last half of 1979 and first half of Chris Arce replaced acting superintendent Karen Harshman in May while the recall movement was getting underway.

Arce's hiring raised protests from some parents because of his work as a consultant to the district. More than $15,000 was paid to Arce's firm before he terminated the contract. Part of that money went into an extensive search for a new superintendent.

District staff members worked during the summer to reorganize four schools but the recall effort continued to plague trustees.

Elected to replace Ortega and Hernandez were Carol Confer and Bill Crawford.

Harshman and Cucamonga School principal Lloyd Dowell left the district during a year that saw a high rate of turnover in teacher and administrator ranks.

State money also came through to help the Chaffey Joint Union High School District find additional classroom space.

Overcrowding in the Rancho Cucamonga area caused freshmen at Alta Loma high to be bused to other schools in the district. Hope came in the eorm of $102,000 in planning money from the state. The money will be used to make plans for a new high school that trustees hope will be built in the Etiwanda area.

Funding problems continued to plague the district in 1980. Although a state ballot measure that would have cut into school funds failed, the district was forced to dig into its reserve funds to cover 1980-81 expenses. A dwindling reserve fund will face trustees when budget talks pick up again in June. Faced with an absentee rate that was cutting out nearly $1 million in state funds for the district, trustees said they would make an all-out effort to keep students in class. The effort appeared to be working at year's end.

To plan for future population shifts, the district established an attendance boundary committee. The committee returned its report in December, asking that significant boundary changes be made in each of the six (including the new high school) attendance areas. Boundary changes will be evaluated when public hearingsbegin on the issue next year.

In November, board president G.A. Chalfant resigned for business reasons. His repalacement is Montclair stockbroker Gerald Wolf, whose term will expire next November The Etiwanda School District, the smallest in the West End, turned up the area's highest achievement test scores this year. It was the only West End district whose students scores, and those scores were consistently above the 50th percentile. Overcrowding has not yet occurred in the district which encompasses Rancho Cucamonga's fastest growing area.

Thanks to new city policies which require districts to show they will be able to accommodate increases in student population generated from a development, the district could avoid problems that have plagued other districts in Rancho Cucamonga.

Actions to keep R.C. municipal court open five days considered

By JIM MARXEN Staff Writer

A Rancho Cucamonga councilman says he is ready to consider actions against the county to keep a municipal court in the city open five days a week

Councilman Mike Palombo said those actions could include a suit against the county, which plans to place the court on a one-day schedule beginning Jan. 16.

According to municipal court administrator Rudolph Corona, judges in the West Valley Court voted on Dec. 2 to reduce the Rancho Cucamonga court's schedule from five days to one day per week.

Under the new schedule, Corona said, the court will be open Fridays for small claims, civil cases and non-jury trials originating in the

Rancho Cucamonga area

All other cases will be moved to the court facility at Sixth Street and Mountain Avenue in Ontario. "They (the judges) felt they could take care of all the trials (in the Rancho Cucamonga area) in one day," he said.

All court personnel will move to the Ontario facility.

Palombo said a recent decision by the Board of Supervisors to retain the Rancho Cucamonga facility was too open ended to insure the facility remain on a full-time basis.

"The board could have amended its ordinance to say Rancho Cucamonga would stay intact. Ultimately the judges have to answer to the board.

Palombo said he has received approximately 60 calls from residents who felt deceived by the board.

He said callers believed that when the board made its decision not to close the court in January it meant that the court would be open on a full-time basis.

Corona said supervisors played no part in reducing the number of sessions at the court. 'By law the Board of Supervisors has the right to designate the location of the courts but judges determine how many sessions will be held at that location.

'It's strictly up to the judges and the decision is based on workload.' Palombo said some of those who call him feel the decision was in retaliation to the city's opposition to a county proposal to locate a law and justice center north of Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park.

But, he added, he feels there are no facts to warrant that feeling.

Corona added that there was "no connection" between the law and justice center controversy and the judges' decision. Norm Guith, who leads a group opposing the law and justice center proposal, said he hoped the action was not in retaliation to his group's Palombo said he planned to challenge the decision after getting support from the rest of the council. That challlenge, he said, would include discussions with state and local officials. He said that although he wanted to keep the support of community service and business groups, he was not interested in establishing a formal organization to fight the

CBMWD asks information on project

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

The Chino Basin Municipal Water District board wants more information before committing itself to a planning budget with other West End governments for a multimillion-dollar water treatment plant.

Directors said Wednesday they want a written commitment from Upland that the site - slightly more than 16 acres at the southwest corner of Benson Avenue and 18th Street - will eventually be transferred to the joint powers authority set up for the water plant and some idea of the land's price.

The board held off approving its share, $7,475, of the $37,375 budget to study the feasibility of the Upland

Carl Masingale, president of the board, said the district should also receive reimbursement for the time spent by Assistant General Manager Tom Homan on the proposed project.

Masingale and other directors noted the district still supports the project in Upland, but needs more answers before committing funds, even though the money will be reimbursed.

arrangement, the Chino Basin district is acting as an intermediary for one of its customers, Park Water

Park cannot join the joint powers authority because, unlike the other agencies, it is a private utility.

The board directed the district staff and the water company to do further work on the arrangement for reimbursing the district. Park provides water to the unincorporated Chino Hills and part of Chino.

Masingale told the board he cast budget on the joint powers authority board.

"I just felt we're running downhill without knowing exactly where we're going," he said.

Masingale said land price on the Upland site would help provide a cost comparison with a second alternative, the proposed Miramar plant sought by the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District in northeast Claremont.

That site has been beset by problems, including defeat of past bond issues, and Pat Kearns, vice president for engineering for Park, said the Pomona Valley "may be go ahead with a separate facility. He noted the rough estimate of cost to build a plant at the Upland site has been calculated at $20 million to treat water from Northern California.

While assuring the board Park would bear the district's costs for involvement in the project through increased rates, Kearns said he did not see any problems with delaying approval of the planning budget on Wednesday

Larry Dilley, water utility director for Upland, said the city bought the land in 1979 for more than $367,500. He added that he did not foresee any stumbling blocks in the conditions the Chino Basin district sought for planning budget approval. The city has not decided yet whether to seek cash payment or an arrangement to decrease the cost venture, Dilley said. In other action, the board directed the district staff to seek additional quotes on the second and final phase of the district's water reclamation

The first phase of the federal- and state-funded study cost $425,000, and at its meeting Nov.26, the board approved a budget of $561,500 for the second phase. However, because of the scope of the remaining work, the board asked for estimates by other firms before committing itself to study's current engineering company, Metcalf and Eddy.

Directors also reviewed the district's options for sewage treatment-plant and pipeline capacity as a member of the Santa Ana Watershed Project Authority, but took no action on Wednesday.

Ayala bill asks more

fire controls

Seantor Ruben S. Ayala (D-Chino) introduced SB 78 which if enacted by the legislature would place responsibility for the use of fire-retardant roofing materials and establish hazardous wildland fire

Existing law does not require buildings used for human habitation around flammable covered wildland to have fireretardant roof coverings and openings into the attic

This bill would require the Director of Forestry to establish hazardous wildland fire zones which classify areas which are critical and hazardous due to the threat of encroaching wildland fire to life and property.

This bill would also require the Commission of Housing and Community Development, with the cooperation of the Department of Forestry, to adopt rules and regulations for fire-retardant roof coverings and openings into the attic area of buildings used for human habitation in the fire zone.

A similar piece of Legislaiton (SB 1938) was introduced Ayala in March of 1978. Although SB 1938 passed the policy committee, it was dropped in Senate Finance after strong opposition from the lumber industry developed. As a result of that aciton. Senator Avala introduced SCR 91 in May of 1978. SCR 91 was adopted and it required the Department of Forestry to submit to the Legislature their recommendations on the subject matter by February 1980. The Department of Forestry has not officially submitted their recommendaitons to the legislature as

Sandbags offered residents

Recent action by the San Bernardino County board of supervisors has made it possible for the county Emergency Services Office to offer sandbags to residents at a "nominal" charge.

Supervisor Robert O. Townsend said property owners can protect themselves "now" from potential floods created when fires last year destroyed thousands of acres of valuable watershed.

Flooding last winter also destroyed many of the county flood control facilities and a heavy rain could create havoc within the county.

Sandbags are also being sent to various county and special district fire stations for use in the event of Minister credits 'informality' for church success

By RICHARD PERAZA Staff Writer

A charismatic church with an informal atmosphere involving every member is the secret to a rapidly growing congregation, according to the Rev. Dan Kricorian.

Kricorian, pastor of Calvary Church in Ontario, a part of the Assembly of God, said his church is an excellent example. He claims membership has tripled in less than two years and that in that time he has had 501 conversions and 150 bap-

He said the church has a new building - only 11/2 years old now but "Our growth is so phenomenal

we're forced to build again.' A $1 million addition to the church's school is on the drawing boards, he said.

We are reaching out to every social strata in the community," he said. "We are sympathetic to those who've been disenfranchised, to those who need help. We're a loving, caring group of people.'

"Our doors are open to everyone," he said. He said members are ex-Lutherans, Catholics, Baptists and Christians of many other sects.

Membership isn't limited to local businessmen and community leaders, he said. "Among them are drug addicts, alcoholics and people with marriage problems You name it and we have it here," he Kricorian said one of his converts was a member of the Saints, a Hell's Angels-type motorcycle gang. "He was third in command and had a most notorious background," the minister said. "He came to this church four months ago and stood in the fover to watch everything."

After being greeted by the congregation, "He accepted Christ as his savior and his life was dramatically changed," Kricorian

"We've had two or three instances where people walked in with guns and they were converted," he said. Kricorian said his success is due to his charismatic and informal approach. "It seems to me the traditional concept people have of church has turned people off. Church has become boring," he said. He said the traditional approach works for many people but has turned many others into "spectators."

"We have a touch of informality. We hold hands across the aisles, we sing, we shake hands. Everybody's involved. I felt God was calling us to Ontario for a church of that character," he said.

He said there are no hymnals in his church. Lyrics for songs are projected on a wall so everyone's eyes are up and not down in a book.

'We put everything into our worship, it's not just going through a formality," he said. "There's a tremendous community feeling. The whole idea is we have all these people coming and we don't want them to be strangers.

'We are a charismatic church,' Kricorian said. "We believe, according to the Bible, that God has restored the gifts of the spirit to the church. We believe in supernatural healing; healing for the body, emotional healing and spiritual healing."

Kricorian said the church also believes in exorcisms and he recalled a recent experience.

A new couple to the church asked him over to their home. "I went over there because there were some very strange things happening. doors opening and doors closing and pictures falling off the walls. Ash trays would rise from the table and land next to the TV and pencils would float up from the table and land next to the TV.

The man, he said, had been dabbling in the occult. He said the man had been practicing astral projection (separation of the spirit from the body) and had traveled, through his spirit, across country.

It's easy to take simple things in life for granted

By Rev. Kenneth R.T. Gordon Montclair Ministerial Association

A while ago I was invited to a very special dinner. What a spread! The table was loaded with everything I from soup to after-dinner mints. You would have suspected our hosts were planning to feed an army, not just four couples! And elegant? I'll say so. Complete, beautiful table settings with utensils I think some had never seen before were at every place; everything was right out of the book of etiquette. The table lacked

One small item was nearly lost among the many pieces, but caught my particular attention and imagination. It was so small one would have thought it was of little importance. This dainty container held SALT! I noticed that everyone at the table waited patiently to use its contents to make their well prepared food taste precisely the way they wanted. Everyone raved about the food - in which I heartily concurred.

But, I wondered how the comments would have run if the salt had been denied them. "Sorry guests, we do not believe in salt around here; therefore, we do not keep or allow its use!" Somehow we would have gotten through the dinner. But I suspect the evening really would have been "unflavored" as a result! And I do not think we would have hoped for another such invitation to dine there, no matter how elegant the table appeared, if the food had not matched up to the decor!

Most, if not all of us take salt for granted, until it is taken away. Then we really miss it and eating becomes a chore, not a pleasure.

The church in our community is like salt. Sometimes it just seems to get lost among the other buildings; the services seem to get lost among the many events in other places scheduled for the same time on Sundays. But, have you ever thought what the community would be like with all spiritual "seasoning" removed? Suddenly, such sections of society become "bad to the taste," indeed.

So, rather than allowing someone to take a shot at the church, remind them that what salt is to one's food, the church is to society - and no one really wants to give up to happiness and family life

Bt REV. W. LEE TRUMAN Copley News Service

Something which opens doors and turns on the lights of insight is the discovery of a truth which applies to making life come alive.

Dr. Hazel G. Werner, family researcher has written: 'The greatest business in the world," he said, "is the growing of sound persons in the family. What we do about this may well determine the destiny of all of us."

It comes down to that daily unimportant decision, that torgotten choice made time after time which determines what we make of ourselves. In short, we and our children after us are the sum total of what we daily choose to be. This is the prime origin of a strong character or a weak

Timothy Date of the New York Times said that juvenile delinquency is not a sudden isolated incident. A child doesn't go bad without a cause, but rather it is the daily undeterred growing in a given direction that is

A probation officer left my office discouraged this morning. He said the kids he deals with feel that nothing will happen to them for wrongdoing, because the courts just send them back again into the same situation which caused them to be delinquents in the first place.

Before we blame the courts as my friend is doing, there is the cause for that youth going to court to begin with. No one is born a noble citizen anymore than anyone is born a black - leather - jacketed villain.

Allene Dixon says: "The criminal in the kindergarten can be a reality and not just a figure of speech.

No one has ever set out to build slums, they slowly grow into w. 'hey are, and they are not changed back in a momen.. Just as slowly a life becomes one of character, or a person of deteriorating principles.

A retiring Methodist minister put it this way to me: "A person who grows old is what he has been all his life, only more so." As we grow older, we grow more and more like our real selves. One day you find that you are what you have been thinking about over the years. Or as someone much wiser than I said: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.'

Paul Holly is serving a life sentence for armed robbery. He told me how it happened. He first toyed with the idea of armed robbery while on guard duty in Vietnam. It made the time pass, and he replayed it again and again in his mind, until he had it down to a foolproof plan. He was honest, never stole anything of value until he was short of money soon after his discharge. Then he put his plan into effect.

This something can happen to anyone who is involved in continued rationalizing lifestyle. It affects the young even more so and that is why the supervision of the growing years are so important.

If you could sit with me in my study during the sad and bitter hours talking to youth who have destroyed their health, character and reputation, it would let you understand how important are the day-by-day choices a

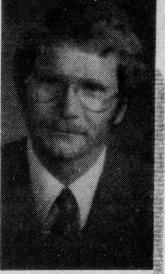

The interesting item is that when parents sit in on these sessions, they often can see the long string of choices they and their offspring have made which has determined their child's emotional growth. The truth is that by an unbroken continuum of choices, both parent and child develop a good or bad character.

Agency fights for rights of car-buying consumers

By DIANE CLARK

Copley News Service Irving Cooper was unemployed when he went out and bought a 1980 Mustang from a dealer. He turned in his old car as a trade-in, put $500 down, signed a sales agreement and was given a key to the car

But the loan company turned him down when he asked for financing. So Cooper went back to the dealer and was given his old car back along with $213. The other $287 was kept by the dealer for expenses - $179 of it as a rental fee for the use of the Mustang and $108 for sales tax and licensing. Cooper wanted the rest of his money back.

And the law was on Cooper's side - though it took some doing to enforce it. There is a state Automobile Sales Act which says the sales contract of the car purchaser is automatically rescinded if the buyer cannot obtain financing and that the full deposit and trade-in Cooper called CalPIRG, which handles consumer complaints.

CalPIRG called the dealer which agreed to refund the $179 rental fee but insisted upon hanging on to the $108 for

On CalPIRG's advice, Cooper then called the Department of Motor Vehicles locally which, in turn, contacted the dealer. His $108 eventulally was returned. This is one example of how the auto financing law can work to the purchaser's advantage. In this case, the dealer ended up getting back a new car that had to be resold as used. But the dealer does not have to give the car to the purchaser until financial arrangements are finalized and, in fact, the law states that when the dealer is financing he is not to give up the car until everything is

If third party financing (through a bank, credit union

Most credit companies are sympathetic if notified of temporary financial setbacks and will make an attempt to work out a payment arrangement. But, legally, the car can be repossessed the day after the buyer defaults on a payment. In the case of a retail sales contract the buyer is given 15 days notice of intent to sell the repossessed car. The buyer has that amount of time, plus a 10-day extension period upon written request, to bring payments current and keep the loan in effect. However, if a finance company is footing the bill, the consumer doesn't need to be given any time to catch up and the balance of the entire loan can be called in immediately

The consumer will automatically forfeit his down payment. But that isn't all. He or she can then be billed

To make matters worse, the creditor can sell the car wholesale at a car auction or to a used car lot for far less than its reatil value. However, the creditor has to take the buyer to court and get an order, known as a

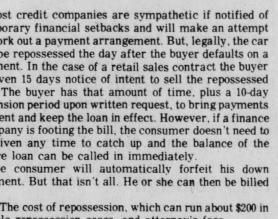

Take the example of one consumer who recently put $2,000 down on a new car that was repossessed after he missed a couple of payments. He not only lost the $2,000 but received a bill for an additional $1,700 which included repossession and reconditioning costs as well as the creditor's loss on resale.

In all fairness to creditors, they usually don't look forward to repossessions. One creditor said her firm recently had to track a car across country and finally located it in Philadelphia before repossession could take repossessed vehicles and have difficulty getting the borrower to pay for the loss even with a court order often because the borrower can't be located.

Sometimes the dealer makes money on a resale. And if the dealer sells the repossessed car for more than the original purchaser was paying, by law he is supposed to return the surplus to the original buyer.

It is a good idea for anyone who has had a car repossessed to check up on the resale price because this doesn't always happen. For instance, Ford and General Motors credit companies have been investigated for refund abuses.

on the side of the belt. He also carried a sword.
"Nigel" is a tough-guy — sitting there in a chair just waiting for somebody to say the wrong thing or look at him the wrong way.

"He's had a long trip down (from Nova Scotia, Canada), raping and pillaging all the way," says a woman as she looks at the rumpled figure.

Other more famous characters are not far from Nigel. Just across the room is W.C. Fields having a laugh with a buddy. Around the corner in another room is Mark Twain, waiting for an audience so he can tell another tall tale.

These characters and others can be seen beginning today when the Rex W. Wignall Museum-Gallery at Chaffey College opens with its display of "Puppets for People of all Ages."

About 200 puppets dating as far back as the turn-of-thecentury will be on display through Jan. 18. Puppets from Asia, Africa, Europe and North America are featured.

Many different types of puppets are represented including marionettes, ventriloquist dummies, hand puppets, finger puppets, puppets controlled by rods and intricate shadow puppets.

Puppet performances and films will also be featured.

The collection has turned the gallery on the college campus into a fantasyland of puppets from the last several decades. Yet the art form dates back hundreds of years to the days of the Greek and Roman empires.

The materials they are made from are limited only by the imagination of their makers. Materials include wood, plastic, polyurethane foam, nylon, leather and various fabrics.

Ralph Strane, director of the college theater and a member of the board of Puppeteers of America, was influential in getting many of the puppets for the show.

Strane explains some of his fascination with puppetry is that it's a way of putting on an extravagant show with as many characters as a puppeteer chooses.

Some of the puppets are made as realistic looking as possible with fine detail in faces and clothing. Others are less realistic in showing human characteristics, but nevertheless their costuming is elaborate.

Strane points out that thousands of dollars are sometimes spent by professional puppeteers to costume one figure.

Probably one of the most interesting types of puppets

Far East.

The shadow puppets are made from leather to allow for flexibility. In the hands of a skilled master, the puppets - controlled by sticks with a shadow being cast at the show are the shadow variety that originated in the on a screen — come to life.

Although the audience does not see the shadow puppets directly, they are decorated in many colors.

"Puppets for People of all Ages" will be open until Jan. 18.

. Gallery hours are from noon to $4\,p.m.$, Monday through Thursday; from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday; Sundays, 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday or not?

You don't have to. It's purely a matter for you to decide.

This newspaper is what is called in newspaper circles, a controlled circulation newspaper. There are dozens across the country—enough even to have conventions. The purpose of a controlled circulation newspaper is to provide local news, local service and local advertising to an important, independent, interested community.

But where does your carrier come in? They are paid a minimum allowance for delivering your local newspaper. They depend on you, really for their income, because when they collect, most of it is theirs. Controlled circulation newspapers work like that, on a voluntary pay plan.

We hope you appreciate and enjoy your newspaper enough to voluntarily pay your carrier. They are dependable. They are rendering you a service. They would like to earn the money. Pay them? Think about it.

By local humane society shelter

Animals not sold to laboratories

To reassure concerned friends of animals, the Humane Society of the Chaffey Community in Ontario has announced that no animals brought to or impounded by the shelter are sold to laboratories.

'It is the policy of the board of directors," said general manager Betty Fryman, "to dispose of unwanted pets in a humane manner. We do not sell animals, dead or alive, to be used for experimental purposes.

Mrs. Fryman said that a number of inquiries have been made since citizen protests in Los Angeles against laboratory sales have been in the news. We want to reassure West End residents that our board does not approve of using pets, whether dead or alive, for these purposes. Most humane societies recognize the need for testing and teaching, but deplore the methods of selection and the treatment of animals used in laboratory procedures," she said. She explained that in communities where animal control is a direct function of local government, sales to laboratories are frequently mandated as an economic

The cities of Ontario, Montclair, Chino and Rancho Cucamonga, she explained, do not maintain their own dog pounds, but contract with the Chaffey Humane Society for all phases of animal control, including disposal of surplus pets.
